

“It was our desire to help others add to their family. Our children have brought such joy and love to us. We wanted to share this miraculous joy with another family. We know how painful infertility is, and [donating our embryos] can help another family achieve their dream. It is our desire that the embryos be used to complete a family. We have peace in knowing these embryos will be loved by their parents and the child be provided a wonderful home..”

A Genetic Mother

“My pregnancy was wonderful and I enjoyed every minute (almost) of it. I shopped for maternity clothes, thrilled at feeling every little baby kick, dealt with nausea, and tiredness—experiences I thought I had lost the chance to have when we chose to adopt several years ago. Now I am a birth mother and an adoptive mother!”

How does Embryo Donation and Adoption Work?

Couples who have embryos in frozen storage choose to give them to another family. This choice gives hope to the adopting couple's dream of having children.

The donation can be made directly through the agency or in an open arrangement. The level of openness is determined by the families themselves after they are matched.

Our agency, in partnership with a local fertility clinic and attorney, assists with:

- Counseling donors and adopters
- Matching families
- Legal contacts
- Home study completion
- Medical services

Statistically, the success rate for delivering to term from frozen embryo adoption is higher than the birth rate of a family who uses their own embryos!

A family choosing embryo donation chooses the gift of life for another family. Even before the families are matched there is a special bond between them based on the shared pain and frustration of infertility.

An adoption agency is focused on placing children into loving families. Embryo adoption is the placement of children into families at their earliest stages of development. The amazing end result is the birth of your adopted child!
